

Ensure your employees receive the right care, at the right time.

When faced with a serious medical condition, your employees will be reassured knowing that the diagnosis is correct and their doctor's treatment plan offers the best possible outcome.

What is our Second Opinion service?

Second Opinion is a valuable service that broadens care and treatment options for your employees. Completely confidential, it allows eligible plan members and dependents with qualifying medical conditions access to an independent medical review done by top specialists in the world.

Why a Second Opinion?

Medical second opinions are a safe path forward. For your employees, a medical second opinion may prevent unnecessary surgery or invasive treatments. Knowing that the best medical minds in North America have reviewed their medical files—and support the diagnosis and treatment plan—can contribute to their mental well-being.

How does Second Opinion work?

Second Opinion is a collaboration between Saskatchewan Blue Cross and WorldCare International, Inc.

When your employee calls the Second Opinion service line, a WorldCare Case Manager talks him/her through the process, provides the necessary release forms and contacts the treating physician to collect medical records.

A team of specialists at a WorldCare Consortium hospital then works together to review every aspect of the case. The written report details the medical consultation, treatment recommendations, and answers to questions the employee or employee's treating physician may have. If needed, an audio consultation can be arranged with the treating physician. Throughout the process, the employee's WorldCare Case Manager stays in close touch.
